Combine & Create • Jensen profiles and warm natural neutral palette provide many options for customization

Mid Century Style ▲

The collection, with clean fine grain engineered veneer finishes is right in line with the Mid Century Modern design style which is one of the most popular trends in furniture and interior design themes today. Classic and simple, Jensen can be used in wide array of custom framing applications from vintage to contemporary art.

Engineered Veneer, known for its consistency and fine close-grain aesthetic attributes, are widely used in creation of furniture, cabinetry and casegoods.

Design Tip:

◀ Elevate Face Mounted Media

The Jensen Collection's slender floater profiles lend new possibilities in the design and display of face mounted prints and photography.

Face mounting, one of the fastest growing trends in the industry at the moment, is the process that involves applying an optically clear adhesive to the face of the print then adhering the print to acrylic.

Face mounted works are often seen in the most modern interior design settings, including offices, hotels (hospitality), for art, signage and other informational media display.

These floaters help upgrade the look by staging the piece with a sleek finished edge, softening the somewhat utilitarian appearance of unframed art.
